STORMWATER: GREEN INFRASTRUCTURE

Homeowners can incorporate green infrastructure in several ways. Rain barrels can be placed under a roof drain to collect rooftop runoff. The rain water is then used to water the plants or wash the car. Rain Gardens are excavated garden areas that collect and infiltrate water. Rooftop runoff can also be directed to them so they are watered naturally every time it rains.

Disconnection of impervious surfaces, such as rooftops, is another way to reduce runoff. It allows downspouts to drain into the lawn or another vegetated area instead of directly to the storm drains. Crossing vegetated area allows the runoff the opportunity for infiltration before entering the storm sewer system.
